On-going opportunities for 'ākonga voice' to be heard.

- There are a number of ways we can seek and measure student voice depending on the purpose and context of the inquiry. We will use a variety of methods to do this so the ākonga feel their views and aspirations are heard and matter.
- To use this information to inform teaching and learning and to reflect on next steps.
- We will use a variety of methods to seek and then measure student voice. However, there is no one best method for all situations. The choice of method should depend on the research question, the available resources, the intended audience, and the ethical considerations involved. The most important thing is to ensure that student voice is valued and respected by all stakeholders involved in the inquiry process.

Strategic Planning Actions	Who is responsible	Resources required	Timeframe	How will you measure success?
Surveys - These are a common and efficient way to collect quantitative and qualitative data from a large number of students. These will be designed to measure various aspects of student voice, such as engagement, wellbeing, motivation, self-efficacy, feedback, learning preferences, etc. Some surveys may be administered online or on paper, and can be anonymous or linked to individual students. Surveys should be appropriate for the age and ability of the students.	Teachers. Management. 'Within-school' Lead Teachers or Management Unit holders (if deemed appropriate).	Surveys (online, paper and newsletters items).	2024 – 2025.	By undertaking pre- and post-surveys as appropriate.
Interviews - these are a more in-depth and personal way to elicit student voice. Interviews can be conducted individually or in groups and can be structured or semi-structured. Interviews allow for probing questions and follow-up responses, and can capture the richness and complexity of student voice. Interviews can also be used to validate or clarify survey results, or to explore emerging themes or issues. Interviews require careful planning, preparation, and analysis, and should be conducted in an ethical and respectful manner.	Teachers. Management. 'Within-school' Lead Teachers or Management Unit holders (if deemed appropriate).	Annual Te reo testing (10% of our student population). Class teachers checking individual students' views and/or progress in specific areas including hauora. Recording documents.	2024 – 2025.	By undertaking pre- and post-interviews as appropriate.

Focus groups - These are a method that involve a facilitated discussion among a small number of students on a specific topic or issue. Focus groups can generate diverse and dynamic perspectives from students, as well as foster peer interaction and collaboration. Focus groups can be used to explore student voice on matters such as school rules, programmes (such as annual sports events), playgrounds, other property matters, school activities/events and involvement in nation-wide events such as Daffodil Day. Focus groups should be carefully moderated to ensure that all participants have an equal opportunity to share their views, and that the discussion stays on topic and respectful.	Management. Teachers in charge of various groups (noted in the Resources column). Teachers generally.	Student Council. Sports Council. GATERS/Extension groups. Kapa kaka groups. Choir groups. Recording documents.	2024 – 2025.	Suggestions and feedback from ākongā generally and also those in the focus groups. Staff feedback. Whānau/parent feedback.
Observations - These are a way to capture student voice through direct and systematic observation of student behaviour, actions, and interactions in natural settings. Observations can provide valuable insights into how students experience school and learning, as well as how they respond to different situations or interventions. Observations can be conducted by teachers or peers and can be recorded using various tools such as checklists, rubrics, field notes, video recordings, etc.	Management. Teachers. Students (e.g. Student Council, Sports Council leaders or a class group).	Recording documents or other ways to record information.	2024 – 2025.	Suggestions and feedback from ākongā generally and teachers after analysis of the observations.
Artifacts – These are products or outputs that students create or use as part of their learning process. Artifacts can include assignments, portfolios, journals, reflections, feedback forms, drawings, posters, videos, podcasts, etc. Artifacts can reveal student voice by showing how students express their ideas, opinions, feelings, values, goals, etc. through their work. Artifacts can also demonstrate student learning progress and achievement over time.	Teachers. Students.	Recording documents or other ways to record information such as podcasts and Seesaw program items.	2024 – 2025.	Portfolio and Seesaw program items. Book work items. Performances (syndicate and school-wide) e.g. kapa haka, choirs, productions and speech competitions.

For the school to give effect to Te Tiriti o Waitangi.

- One of the primary objectives for boards will be to give effect to Te Tiriti o Waitangi by:
 - working to ensure that their plans, policies and local curriculum reflect local tikanga, mātauranga Māori and te ao Māori.
 - taking all reasonable steps to make instruction available in tikanga and te reo Māori, and,
 - achieving equitable outcomes for Māori students.
- This objective will take effect on 1 January 2021. This will provide schools with more time to prepare for the changes and give effect to them.
- The Government is taking practical steps to support the growth of te reo Māori capability in the education workforce through initiatives such as Te Ahu o te Reo Māori. This will help schools provide te reo Māori lessons.
- Ministry staff will be able to provide boards with advice on how they can initiate conversations with their local communities to ensure their plans, policies and local curriculum reflect local tikanga Māori, mātauranga Māori and te ao Māori.

Action 5

If one was to walk into Richmond School and any classroom within the school, how would one know it was a school in Aotearoa? As per the quote by Janelle Riki-Waaka, CORE Education....

- Who believes we need to focus on what it means to be a school unique to Aotearoa New Zealand and reflecting our bicultural heritage gives mana to Tiriti o Waitangi. Janelle encourages educators to ask themselves: How would I know I am in a school in Aotearoa? She believes it is a moral and ethical imperative to protect and honour te reo Māori, tikanga Māori and our bicultural history for every student in every school in New Zealand.
- 'A right to come to school and see their culture'.
- Te Mātaiaho is potentially a game changer and the continual improvement of our school for the betterment of our learners, our community and our society in general.
- Consider the many ways to improve teaching and learning of te reo and tikanga within our school and in terms of the new 'Curriculum Refresh'.

To continue to embed Culturally Responsive Practices into our practices and programme.

- A culturally responsive and sustaining pedagogical approach values and builds upon the knowledge, values, languages, cultures, identities, whānau, communities, lived experiences and whakapapa of ākonga. Kaiako recognise and actively redistribute power and status among all members of the learning community.
- The cultures, languages, homes and lived experiences of ākonga influence how they understand and make sense of the world and are an integral part of who they are as learners.
- This approach strengthens the sense of identity and wellbeing of ākonga and promotes equity and inclusivity in learning environments.
- A culturally responsive inclusive local curriculum or parau ā-kura that supports the identities, languages, cultures of all ākonga also supports ākonga well-being. Well-being weaves across all curricula.

To consider the linkages between the Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies and greater focus on these during the next two years.

- There are many possible linkages between the NZ Curriculum Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies.
- Both should be integrated into class programmes with many considered the same or similar depending on the context, their use and the purpose of the teaching and learning.

Strategic Planning Actions	Who is responsible	Resources required	Timeframe	How will you measure success?
The linkages between the NZ Curriculum Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies are as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The NZ Curriculum Key Competencies are the capabilities that people have and need to develop to live and learn today and in the future. They are: Thinking, Relating to others, Using language, symbols, and texts, Managing self, and Participating and contributing. • The Tātaiako Competencies are the cultural competencies that teachers need to develop to successfully teach Māori learners. They are: Wānanga, Whanaungatanga, Manaakitanga, Tangata Whenuatanga, and Ako. • The linkages between the two sets of competencies are based on the idea that both aim to foster learner-centred and culturally responsive education that values and supports the language, culture, and identity of all learners, especially Māori. • The following table shows some examples of how the NZ Curriculum Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies can be aligned and integrated in teaching and learning: 	Management. Teachers to introduce them to the children and embed them into their class programmes.	Staff meetings. Professional Development sessions.	2024 – 2025.	Teachers have a working knowledge and understanding of the linkages between the Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies. Students have a working knowledge and understanding of the linkages between the Key Competencies and the Tātaiako Competencies.

NZ Curriculum Key Competency	Tātaiako Competency	Examples
Thinking	Wānanga	Teachers and students participate in robust dialogue for the benefit of Māori learners' achievement. They use critical thinking skills to explore different perspectives, question assumptions, and solve problems.
Relating to others	Whanaungatanga	Teachers and students actively engage in respectful working relationships with Māori learners, parents and whānau, hapū, iwi and the Māori community. They build trust, empathy, and collaboration through effective communication and interaction.
Using language, symbols, and texts	Manaakitanga	Teachers and students show integrity, sincerity and respect towards Māori beliefs, language and culture. They use appropriate language, symbols, and texts to express their ideas, opinions, feelings, values, and goals.
Managing self	Tangata Whenuatanga	Teachers and students affirm Māori learners as Māori. They provide contexts for learning where the language, identity and culture of Māori learners and their whānau is affirmed. They also manage their own learning goals, actions, and emotions.
Participating and contributing	Ako	Teachers and students take responsibility for their own learning and that of Māori learners. They recognise that learning is reciprocal and collaborative. They contribute to the learning community by sharing their knowledge, skills, and experiences.

Action 9

To continue to understand and implement the new 'Curriculum Refresh' Te Mātaiaho document including Aotearoa New Zealand Histories.

- Te Mātaiaho is potentially a game changer and the continual improvement of our school for the betterment of our learners, our community and our society in general.
- Consider ways to improve teaching and learning within our school.
- Te Mātaiaho is designed to give practical effect to Te Tiriti o Waitangi and be inclusive, clear, and easy to use.
- It has been developed over the last few years in collaboration with the education sector, students, whānau, communities, and a wide range of interested organisations and communities.
- The updated draft of Te Mātaiaho is expected to be released in Term 4, 2023, and will include the three refreshed learning areas which have been released so far: te ao tangata | social sciences, English, and mathematics and statistics.
- The other five learning areas are being refreshed and will be released in 2024 and 2025. Schools and kura have until 2027 to begin using the complete refreshed curriculum, although mathematics and statistics and English must be used from 2025.
- Te Tiriti o Waitangi (Te Tiriti) is a central pillar of Te Mātaiaho,
- Important principles for realising the vision and aspirations of Te Mātaiaho derive from the preambles and articles of Te Tiriti. Te Tiriti and its principles (as articulated by the Courts and the Waitangi Tribunal) set out obligations for the Crown and Māori that guide how tangata Tiriti' and tangata whenua can live together with mutual respect. The key principles include rangatiratanga, partnership, participation, active protection, equity, and options. They provide for the active protection of taonga, including te reo Māori, tikanga Māori, and mātauranga Māori, and enable fair and equitable educational processes and outcomes for Māori and for all ākonga. Te Mātaiaho is designed to foster the next generation of Te Tiriti partners by moving beyond the rhetorical notion of 'honouring' Te Tiriti to give effect to it and its principles. It will help ensure that every ākonga understands what it means to live in Aotearoa New Zealand and their place in it. Transformation within and through education and schooling requires leadership that is courageous, resilient, and productively disruptive – leadership by educators who hold themselves accountable to Te Tiriti and its principles, to their communities, and to those ākonga who have historically been left behind or situated on the margins.
- Te Tiriti and its principles provide the vision and mandate for New Zealanders to exercise their mutual responsibilities to each other. Giving effect to Te Tiriti and its principles through a refreshed school curriculum creates an inclusive learning platform for all ākonga to participate in and enjoy an education that extends every learner's open-ended potential, produces success in multiple forms, and enables the fulfilment of lifelong ambitions and dreams. Knowing who we are, where we come from, and what makes us unique as a country will enable a more confident international outlook that extends within and beyond our Pacific locality to the global opportunities offered across the world. New Zealand's vision for education is grounded in New Zealanders' aspirations for education. Through giving effect to Te Tiriti and its principles, it aims to enable every New Zealander to learn and excel, to help their whānau and community thrive, and to build a productive and sustainable economy and an inclusive and caring society.

Action 10

To continue to develop and implement our recently devised Local Curriculum.

- Local curriculum is the way that schools in New Zealand bring The New Zealand Curriculum to life for their learners. It should reflect the needs, identity, language, culture, interests, strengths and aspirations of the learners and their families. It should also help learners engage with the knowledge, values, and competencies of The New Zealand Curriculum.
- Schools must develop a local curriculum in NZ because it is part of their responsibility to design and implement a curriculum that is responsive and relevant to their learners and communities. This means that schools can tailor their curriculum to suit their learners' needs, interests, and strengths, as well as the local issues, priorities, and preferences of their communities. A local curriculum can also help schools to integrate Te Tiriti o Waitangi into their teaching and learning, and to support the inclusion of Aotearoa New Zealand's histories in social sciences.

We have been developing our Local Curriculum document for a number of years (2020 – 2023). This having been a recommendation from the ERO review team after their last review – December 2019.

To continue to develop and implement Curriculum Pathways.

- Curriculum pathways are the learning programmes that students follow to achieve their educational and career goals. They can be designed to suit the needs, interests, and aspirations of different students, as well as the vision and values of the school and its community. Curriculum pathways can also reflect the local context and culture, and incorporate the principles and learning areas of The New Zealand Curriculum¹.
- Determine and focus on curriculum pathways in our school.
- They are to be progressive pathway so when our children leave Richmond School they do so with specific skills, understandings and attainments at specific age levels.

To develop and implement new planning templates specifically for the 'Curriculum Refresh' in all curriculum areas.

- We need to develop planning forms to include all aspects of the new Curriculum Refresh document - Te Mātaiaho. This is a very important task, as Te Mātaiaho is the refreshed New Zealand curriculum that will support students to experience success in their learning. It will give practical effect to Te Tiriti o Waitangi, and will be inclusive, clear about the learning that matters.

To develop and implement an AI policy and procedures.

- Artificial Intelligence (AI) is a rapidly developing technology that can transform many aspects of our lives, including education. At Richmond school, we recognise the immense potential that AI has for enhancing the learning at our school.
- AI can be used in various ways in an educational setting. It can help students learn, complete administrative tasks, provide insights through learning analytics, and create virtual learning environments. However, the use of AI also requires certain considerations to ensure its effective and ethical use.
- An algorithm in AI is a set of steps that uses data or information and creates results that the person can see as text or pictures. These algorithms take data from questions or statements and can do things like change words, answer questions, and sort texts. The quality of AI outputs depends on the quality of the input prompts, and a good understanding of a given subject will help the AI user to evaluate these outputs. In this way, AI is not a replacement for knowledge, judgment, or learning, but it can support the planning and drafting of work.
- Richmond School recognises staff are using AI technology now and will continue to do so in personal and professional settings and will now be part of our lives and part of our students working lives, new roles and job opportunities.
- This policy document outlines how we at Richmond School intend to use AI in our school. We believe that with thoughtful planning and consideration, AI can significantly improve our educational practices and help us offer a better learning experience for our students. However, caution must also be applied to ensure tools are utilised in an ethical and responsible way.
